

Shaved!

Color and style: Robert Van Shaik had a color change, but Gill Frost lost her locks at Campaspe Downs. Hairdresser, Vicki, from Naturally Hair in Kyneton was happy to oblige. Pictures: Chris Fleming and Don Gunn.

Research into leukemia and cancer will benefit from a number of 'Shave for a Cure' events in Kyneton last Saturday.

At Prendergast's, opposite the Kyneton railway station, the 'Crop a Tradie' afternoon raised in excess of $10,000, with the top crop price being on the head of plumber Jeff Thaw, (pictured before and after, left and right), who lost his locks for $5000. Ben Hunter and Barry Hourigan were others in the high-price bracket.

"The Prendergast family business is proud to be associated with tradespeople who helped raised more than $10,500 on the day," Chris Prendergast said.

Meanwhile, out at Campaspe Downs, hair was being colored and heads cropped for the 'Shave of a Cure' effort in another successful venture held locally. The crew at the resort came into Kyneton on Saturday night, where more money was raised at Kelly's Pub with the shave and dye routine.
